

Come Again a Bit, Freddy

1

Candles tremble on the nightstand,
Ink still wet on your breath.
I'm waiting in the hush between heartbeats,
Your whisper slips beneath my dress.

2

I feign sleep, a fragile fortress,
But your fingers find the door.
You say, "Come again a bit, Freddy,"
And I'm gone, I'm yours once more.

3

*No one gave me kisses like yours,
Not a lover, not a ghost in the dark.
You strike a match inside my marrow,
Carve your name across my heart.*

4

Moonlight drips on your shoulder,
Sheets crumpled like confession pages.
I rise, I fall, I rise again —
Our love a quiet war that rages.

5

Your sigh curls like a secret,
A vow stitched in my skin.
"Come again a bit, Freddy,"
Pull me under, pull me in.

6

No one gave me kisses like yours,
Not a lifetime's worth of yearning.
I drown inside your chapel mouth,
And rise, endlessly burning.

7

We were the perfect match — a wildfire,
Two sparks colliding in the hush.
We wrote symphonies in each other's marrow,
Every touch a crimson brush.

8

But forever slipped between the bedclothes,
A ghost that wouldn't stay.
We lost the sun beyond the curtains,
In the night, we lost our way.

9

Your hands were my last religion,
Your lips, a holy sin.
We knew each other's sacred language,
The world could never step in.
I keep coming back to you —
Again, again, again.

10

No one gave me kisses like yours,
Where the stars fall into ash.
I return each time to your midnight,
I return, I burn, I crash.

11

Come again a bit, Freddy
A ghost in the linen's sigh.
I come, I go, I come again —
Your name my last goodbye.

12

*No one gave me kisses like yours,
Not a lifetime's worth of yearning.
I drown inside your chapel mouth,
And rise, endlessly burning.*

13

Come again a bit, Freddy,
Oh come again a bit, Freddy.
Your name my last goodbye,
Oh, my last goodbye
Your name my last goodbye,